A good, suspenseful historical set during the Crimean War. The story is told in a non-linear sequence and involves a bit of time travel shenanigans. Some of the time jumps seem a bit gimmicky, and I suspect that the whole thing won't hold up as well on a second listen. But on the first listen it's enthralling.

Doctor Who: The Angel of Scutari by Paul Sutton

The Crimean War. The Russian military successes in Turkey caused a negative reaction among thalassocracy, which created the basis for the military alliance of Britain and France. This alliance was an expression of Sea power, and had an anti-Russian and anti-Land character.
