The Utopia Of Rules On

The Utopia of Rules: On Technology, Stupidity, and the Secret Joys of Bureaucracy is a 2015 book by anthropologist David Graeber about how people "relate to" and are influenced by bureaucracies. Graeber previously wrote Debt: The First 5000 Years and The Democracy Project, and was an organizer behind Occupy Wall Street. Graeber signed a book deal with Melville House toward the end of 2014, and ...

The overwhelming number of stars and praise for The Utopia of Rules seems to justify it. What I read though, was a a bunch of thrown together essays written stream of consciousness style, jumbles of logic with vague points leading nowhere, and statements of caricature masquerading as fact, and several fantastical 'rebuttal' arguments with fictional critics.

These are the rules of my utopia: You cannot commit murder. Because it is wrong to kill living things. You have to be indoors by 12:00 a.m., unless authorized otherwise. So people do not cause trouble. You must recycle. So the utopia does not get polluted. Show other people respect and kindness. So people do not get in fights and hurt feelings ...

My Utopia: The Rules

An ideal utopia would not have a religion, or if they did, it would be one made up by a leader. For rule 9, there are other ways to "keep their head on straight & keep them away from drugs, alcohol & violence" and playing an instrument will not help everybody. There are people in the real world who play instruments, but are alcoholics or druggies.
