"Self-exploration of gender identity is a process, and when a child comes out to a parent, it involves a lot of trust that the parents will be affirming," she says. If you think your child is transgender, make it clear you'll love them and provide shelter and kindness no matter what.

What Parents Need to Know About Gender Identity

Why does it matter so much that people know what gender I am? My parents are upset because I wear a binder to hide my breasts. Why does it matter if other people can see my breasts? I don't want strangers looking at my body. If I want to wear all black and baggy clothes than let me.
